Non-Western art and artists heavily under-represented on Wikipedia

The intricate artwork inside Sultan Ahmed Mosque Dome, by By Ank Kumar – Own work, CC BY-SA 4.0

New research identifies a strong fixation on the Western canon in Wikipedia's coverage of visual arts, but offers ways towards a more truly global perspective.

If you were asked to name artworks or artists, how many would be non-Western? You might visit the free encyclopedia Wikipedia to support your search; after all 1.7 billion visitors per month do just this. However, new research highlights that even with Wikipedia's approach – ensuring anyone can edit and add content – there is still a bias towards Western artworks and artists.

Artist and scholar Waqas Ahmed and veteran Wikipedian Dr. Martin Poulter were well-placed to investigate Wikipedia's perspective on the visual arts. For example, they observed with the English language version of Wikipedia, "its 'List of sculptors' is 99% Western, 'List of painters by nationality' is around 75% European and its 'List of contemporary visual artists' is 80% European". They probed whether this was just a problem with those articles, or just with the English language Wikipedia. "There appears to be a systemic cultural bias against non-Western visual art and artists across all Wikipedia platforms and in various languages", Ahmed says. "We hope that this research will remind people that the Western artistic canon is but one of many worldwide – each deserving respect and appreciation on its own terms."

With a commitment to identifying and overcoming barriers to diversity online, Wikimedia UK, the national charity for the Wikimedia open knowledge movement, funded the research. Director of Programmes and Evaluation Daria Cybulska says "The vision of the Wikimedia movement has always been 'a world in

Mary Barbour

From Wikipedia, the free encyclopedia

Mary Barbour (née Rough) (20 February 1875<sup>[1]</sup> – 2 April 1958) was a Scottish political activist, local councillor, bailie and magistrate. She was closely associated with the Red Clydeside movement in the early 20th century and especially for her role as the main organiser of the women of Govan who took part in the rent strikes of 1915.<sup>[2]</sup>

Mary Barbour

Life [ edit | edit source ]

Barbour was born on 20 February 1875 at 37 New Street, Kilbarchan to Jean Gavin and James Rough, a handloom carpet weaver.<sup>[1]</sup> She had three children. Barbour attended school until she was fourteen years old. In 1887, the family moved to the village of Elderslie and she gained work eventually becoming a carpet printer. On 28 August 1896, she married engineer David Barbour (2 May 1873 – 13 November 1957) at Warriston, Elderslie.<sup>[3][4][5]</sup> By the 1901 census, the couple had settled in Govan at 5 Macleod Street, where they lived with their son James.<sup>[6]</sup> By the 1911 census, including another son William, had moved to 43 Ure Street (now Uist Street).<sup>[7]</sup>

In 1933 Barbour moved to a council house at 34 Cromdale Street in Drumoyne, Glasgow where she lived until her death.<sup>[8][9]</sup> She died the same year as David at the age of 83 in the Southern General Hospital, Glasgow,<sup>[9]</sup> and her funeral was held at Craigton Crematorium in Cardonald, near Glasgow.

Political activism [ edit | edit source ]

Main article: Red Clydeside

Barbour first became politically active after joining and becoming an active member of the Kinning Park Co-operative Guild. Her political activism led to her leading the South Govan Women's Housing Association during the Glasgow rent strikes of 1915, when she actively organised tenant co-operation and resistance. The protesters became known as "Mrs Barbour's Army", and included Agnes Dollan, Helen Crawford, Mary Laird, and Mary Johnston.

Women's Peace Crusade [ edit | edit source ]

Barbour was a founder of the Women's Peace Crusade \(WPC\) at the "Great Women's Peace Conference" in June 1916, with Helen Crawford and Mary Johnston.

1. Answer the new user questions

The main heading of the survey is "Welcome, Sara Thomas (training account 01)!" followed by the text: "Help us improve your Wikipedia experience by answering a few optional questions."

The survey contains three questions:

- "Why did you create your account today?" with a dropdown menu showing "Please select..."
- "Have you ever edited Wikipedia?" with a dropdown menu showing "Please select..."
- "Wikipedia is available in nearly 300 languages. Are there other languages you read and write in?" with a text input field containing "English" and a label "Add up to 10 languages..."

At the bottom of the survey, there are two buttons: a blue "Finish" button and a red "Skip this survey" link.

The footer of the page includes links for "Privacy policy", "About Wikipedia", "Disclaimers", "Contact Wikipedia", "Mobile view", "Developers", "Statistics", and "Cookie statement".

Click on your user name on the top right

2. You'll be guided to your new Homepage

The screenshot shows the Wikipedia user homepage for Sara Thomas (training account 01). At the top right, the user's name and account type are displayed, along with navigation links for Talk, Sandbox, Preferences, Beta, and Watchlist. Below the user name, there are tabs for Homepage, User page, and Talk. A search bar is located in the top right corner. A welcome message box is overlaid on the page, stating: "Welcome to your homepage! You can always click on your username to return here. On your homepage, you can find suggested edits, ask questions to your mentor, and see your impact." A "Got it" button is present in the bottom right of the message box. The main content area includes an email address: sara.thomas@wikimedia.org.uk (confirm). Below this is a "Suggested edits" section with a progress indicator showing "1 of 2". A message states: "Wikipedia is built by people like you working together. Your edits help improve Wikipedia and further the mission to share free knowledge with the world. Continue to start with small suggested edits." The "Choose some topics you are interested in editing" section follows, with a note: "We'll try to suggest articles that match your interests." There are two categories of topics: "Culture" and "History and Society". The "Culture" category has buttons for Architecture, Art, Comics and anime, Entertainment, Fashion, Literature, Music, Performing arts, Sports, TV and film, and Video games. The "History and Society" category has buttons for Biography (all), Biography (women), Business and economics, and Education. A "Select all" link is provided for each category. On the right sidebar, there is a section titled "0 edits so far" with the text: "Help extend free knowledge to the world by editing topics most to you." Below this, it says: "Start with a few suggested edits, then see how many people are viewing your contributions here." At the bottom of the sidebar, there is a section titled "Get help with editing" with the text: "Top help pages about editing" and a list of links: "How to write a good article", "How to edit a page", and "How to add an image".
